We don't know what fall will bring, we may not all be learning in the same physical space or at the same time. Learning still needs to be personal. These virtual learning opportunities allow you to explore Blended and Proficiency/Competency Based Learning through the lens of Personalized Learning and the new "normal".

Presenters from the Institute for Personalized Learning will lead this training. Joe Beckman is presenting the keynote.

Who Should Attend:

This training will provide valuable information for all educators.

Keynote, August 10 – #ConnectionOn! Reclaiming a Culture of Human Connections. Be prepared to be energized as Joe Beckman shares strategies for virtual and nonvirtual classroom connections.

August 10, Keynote, Joe Beckman

Human Connection MATTERS! However, as our society settles into our new normal, how do we reclaim that connection in today's world? Based off Joe's 18 years of experience speaking in schools world-wide, this dynamic and high-energy keynote equips educators with easy-to-implement tools – both virtual and nonvirtual – that maximize human connection, boost personal happiness, and optimize student impact.

August 11-12, participants will explore strategies to:

- ❖ Facilitate small group instruction through a blended model.
- ❖ Develop and implement proficiency/competency-based progress and instructional practices used in personalizing learning.
- ❖ Enhance educator/learner relationships through more one-on-one interactions during virtual learning.
- ❖ Address student and educator social emotional needs as we come back to a new school year.

August 19-20, participants will:

- ❖ Explore the development of a learner profile.
- ❖ Learn strategies for providing actionable feedback to learners.
- ❖ Discover how to use flexible groups to support a learner-centered environment.
